The New York State Canal System, operated by the New York State Canal Corporation, is a navigable 524-mile inland waterway that crosses upstate New York. The Canal System features numerous parks and recreation areas along the Erie Canalway Trail. The NYS Canal Corporation is promoting the completion of all segments of the Erie Canalway Trail along the 524-mile canal system.

This Inn to Inn Touring brochure is intended to help promote the development of the Canalway Trail and trail-related heritage tourism along the Erie Canal System.

Spend an overnight or a week discovering country inns and historic villages along 82 miles of New York's premier historical and recreational trail.

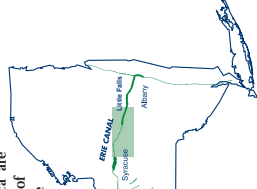

Almost two hundred years ago, miles pulled barges and packet boats along the towpath of the Erie Canal. They moved produce from western frontier farms to the populated eastern cities and carried pioneers on their journey westward.

Today, the pioneers who travel the canal and its towpath wear hiking boots or mount their trusty bikes. Others pilot or paddle their boats. What once was a thoroughfare of commerce is now a haven for recreation.

The Erie Canalway Trail in Onondaga, Madison, Oneida and Herkimer Counties

More than 82 miles of trail, with many access points, stretch from Dewitt (east of Syracuse) to Little Falls, crossing through historic areas, bustling canal towns, and serene rural landscapes. The trail is steeped in history, including active and abandoned canal locks, aqueducts, and forts that date back to the era of the French and Indian War. Museums along the way bring canal history to life. Just east of Syracuse, is the Old Erie Canal State Historic Park, a 36-mile linear park, managed by the NYS Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation, where you can experience the Erie Canal as it was in the 19th century. Gaming in Verona, mining for diamonds in Herkimer and a zoo and brewery tour in Utica are examples of the wide variety of activities available along the Erie Canalway Trail.

Choose a segment or enjoy the entire trail. Hikekeepers along the route will welcome you with gracious hospitality at the end of each days adventure.
